

ACQUARIUM MAP

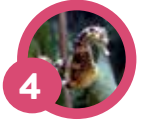

BLACK TIP SHARK STAR 2015
Lives in tropical waters from the Red Sea to the Indo-Pacific Ocean. Considered the reef "cleaner": in fact, as with other species of shark, it feeds on fish which are often sick and therefore weaker, thus contributing to maintain the reef and its ecosystem in good health.

ARI AND CUBA THE GREEN TURTLES
So heavy and yet so light: these two beautiful green turtles are the heaviest creatures in the aquarium, weighing an estimated 160 kg each. Yet they glide through the water with effortless agility and elegance. Glutton for green salad, they each consume almost 4 kg per day.

NAPOLEON FISH
Characterised by the "hump" growing on its head and reminiscent of Napoleon's hat, it grows up to a length of 2 metres. Over fishing and illegal fishing on the coral reef is endangering the survival.

POT-BELLIED SEAHORSE
This curious kind of seahorse takes its name from its large paunch which, after mating, can hold up to one thousand little juveniles. It lives in the temperate seas of Australia and New Zealand and, like other species, is protected by strict laws. The specimens exhibited come from a breeding project.

BANNGAI CARDINAL FISH
This fish, which was once found in the coral reefs of the Indo-Pacific Ocean, today can only be found in a small group of Indonesian islands called Banngai, after which the species is named. Its particular livery allows it to camouflage among the spines of the diadem sea urchin where it can find shelter. The male hatches eggs in his mouth, "giving birth" to little larvae 2mm long.

CORALS
Not plants but animals!! They belong to the same group of jellyfish and are among the oldest representatives of the animal kingdom. Live in colonies and some species are responsible for the "construction" of coral reefs, huge structures visible even from space.

YELLOW MOUTH BARRACUDA NEW SUMMER 2015
A formidable predator, it lives on the Atlantic coast of Africa and in recent years is also proliferating in the Mediterranean Sea. It has a long, tapered body and moves in large shoals near the coast where it "patrols", in search of prey.
